The Pennsylvania solon who wants to modify the law which prohibits the sale of liquor on election days, so as to permit it to be sold before 7 a. m. and after 7 p. m., probably wants to give the boys a chance to load up before voting begins and to celebrate after it is over.

In a law case in Indianapolis, in which John S. Wise, formerly of Virginia, and Russell Harrison, son of the ex-President, were employed on opposite sides, the latter pronounced something the former said "false." When Court was over and they got outside, Russell hurried back into Court and demanded the protection of the Court, very much to the surprise of the ex-Virginian, who says he only demanded an apology. Russell is a protectionist, and seems to carry it to an extreme.

AT THE STATE CAPITAL

NEW ENGLAND MANUFACTURERS OF COTTON GOODS

Will Visit Some of the Prominent Towns in the State—S. A. L. Foundry Closed—The Supreme Court—Otho Wilson Sworn in as Railroad Commissioner—Death of Montford McGehee.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, April 1 1895.

A committee of prominent New England manufacturers left Portsmouth, Va., this morning on a special train provided by the Seaboard Air Line. The committee is composed of some of the most prominent manufacturers of cotton goods in the United States, among whom is Mr. T. Jefferson Coolidge, a late minister to France. The committee is under the direction of Mr. D. A. Tompkins, of Charlotte, and will visit prominent manufacturing towns along the Seaboard route. The party is composed of many wealthy capitalists and they are simply visiting the South on a tour of inspection to gain knowledge and information about our resources. The committee is expected here tomorrow evening. Vice President St. John, of the Seaboard, has sent special telegrams to railroad officials, where the committee will make stops, advising them of the intended visit. The telegram says: "The committee will visit all mills and water powers en route. If your people desire to show them any special attention I should be advised of it immediately. Notify owners of water powers and mills, together with your leading citizens of this intended visit. We regard it as having special significance."

Suitable arrangements will be made by leading citizens for their entertainment while here.

The first day of registration for the coming municipal election, which was held Saturday, is considered very light.

Register of Deeds, J. J. Rogers, was appointed a Trustee of the Deaf and Dumb Institution by an act of the last General Assembly. There is a provision in the Statues against a person holding two offices at one time. There are Democrats guilty of the same offense. The Progressive Farmer and Caucasian will say something on the subject in their next issue.

The Seaboard Air Line has closed its foundry here, and converted the room into a boiler shop. Fifteen men lose their positions thereby. The office of Master Machinist has been abolished, which position has been held by Sherman Shaw, Esq. Mr. David M. King, who for twenty years has been a faithful engineer, has been promoted to the position of Travelling Engineer for the system.

Auditor Furman has received numerous letters and telegrams from persons desiring to know whether there has been any change in the law for listing and assessing real and personal property. There has been no change. Assessors and listers will be appointed by the County Commissioners for Wake county to-morrow.

The Supreme Court takes up appeals from the Ninth district this week.

Otho Wilson took the oath of office as Railroad Commissioner under Judge Walter Clark this morning at 10 o'clock and immediately assumed the duties of the office. Capt. T. W. Mason, the retiring commissioner has, gone to his home in North Hampton County. He would have remained in the city to-day, but he had an important case in court. This is Otho's third visit to the city since the adjournment of the Legislature.

Mr. Montford McGehee who has been one of the most prominent men in the State, died at his residence last night. Mr. McGehee was Commissioner of Agriculture before Mr. John Robeson, and has represented Person county in the General Assembly a number of times. He married a daughter of Hon. George E. Badger.

The decision in the case of George Mills, who brutally murdered his nephew near this city, will come to the Governor to-day from the Supreme Court. Mills appealed from the Superior Court and the Supreme Court affirmed the lower Court's decision. Gov. Carr will probably set the day of execution to-morrow.

Wang.

"Wang," more superb than ever before in its spectacular effects and magnificent costumes comes to the Opera House on next Friday night the 5th inst.

"Wang" when presented here last season simply captivated its audience and the Wilmington people thought it then to have reached its zeneith. But this famous Comic Opera has been touring other parts of the country with a success that has astounded even the managers and author of the opera, and is presented this season on a spectacular scale never attempted in previous seasons by the management. Fully $15,000 has been spent upon scenery which actually represents the City of Bangkok, and the palace of the King of Siam.

The costumes are of unusual beauty, even for a spectacular opera, and have been created from drawings especially made from those worn by the Siamese royal family and Court, the women of the harem and the common people of Burmah, Siam, Cambodia and Cochen-China. Miss Virginia Earle, the captivating beauty, who played the part of Mataya, the crown prince of Siam, when the company were seen here last season is still with the company, and will appear just as charming as ever in the same role.

Criminal Circuit Court.

A special dispatch to the STAR last night from Raleigh, says: Chas. A. Cook took the oath as Judge of the new Criminal Circuit Court before Judge Montgomery, to-day, and will make a big fight against Judge Meares, who has been appointed and commissioned by the Governor.

Northern Mill Owners.

A number of mill owners from Northern cities left Portsmouth, Va., yesterday, a telegram to Mr. Thos. D. Meares, agent here for the Seaboard Air Line says, who are on a tour South searching for locations. They will visit every locality along that line where there is any water power or where a mill could be placed.

THE NEW POLICE FORCE

Take the Oath of Office in the Presence of the Police Board and Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen and the Police Board met together yesterday at 12 o'clock for the purpose of swearing in the newly elected and old police officers that were retained. The City Court room, clerk's office, hallway and front porch were crowded with several hundred spectators.

Chief of Police-elect Melton was called and sworn in by magistrate and ex-Chief R. B. Clowe, who, in fact, swore in all of the newly appointed city employes. When Melton had taken the oath of office the ex-Chief handed him his badge and equipments and in an appropriate speech stated that he gave them to him with pleasure hoping he would fill the office in a manner that would elicit praise. He also said the responsibility is great and there will be found troubles of all kinds, but that his success depended partly on the conduct of his privates. Mr. Melton thanked him. Mr. Chadbourn then read names of persons for positions on the police force as follows:

Regulars—Robert M. Capps, Robert Green, H. H. Woebse, D. S. Bender, Louis Gordon, C. D. Gore, J. H. Hewett, R. H. Moore, J. L. Sallings, G. W. Smith, H. Teitgen, G. J. McClammy, R. L. Dixon, C. E. Wood, W. B. Savage, J. R. Davis, William Sheehan, Thomas Thayer, Thomas Lossen, James W. Smith, Andrew C. Neilson, C. O. Knox, John W. Holmes, R. G. Holmes, James Brinkley, H. R Kuhl, J. G. Carney, Charles L. Frost, R. F. Gore, E. O. Orrell, Henry Whitehead, Willis Richardson, Louis L. Sheridan, Louis Geyer.

Substitutes—C. E. Collins, B. R. King, L. A. Hewett, David Bryant, Andrew Haulsey, J. N. McDuffy.

After being sworn in, Mr. Chadbourn said that although they were appointed by the Police Board and could not be discharged by any other body, he insisted that they must respect the Mayor and Board of Aldermen. He said there were one or two rules they must obey. First, there shall be no drunkenness, and a policeman shall not go into a bar-room at any time unless called in in case of a disturbance, and that if any officer continually refuses to pay any honest debt he shall be dismissed.

Mayor Fishblate said that this was a new era in the police department of Wilmington, and he thought it would be a successful one. He complimented the Board on their good taste in selecting the officers they did, saying he was not acquainted with some of them, but they were all of fine physique, and he thought, on the whole, would reflect credit on the city. The Board had been very conservative, he said, inasmuch as they had appointed Democrats, Republicans and Populists, and he thought they should have the thanks of the community.

Mr. Chadbourn called the following other city employes who took the obligations:

John W. Galloway and J. H. Harper, clerks of markets; Andrew J. Allen, superintendent of lights; L. H. Byrant, superintendent streets; Samuel Howard, captain of trash carts; Thos. E. Scott, messenger; L. R. Mason, day janitor; John Fitzgerald, night janitor; M. D. Croom and Joseph E. Sampson health officers; William T. Spooner, cattle weigher.

Mr. W. J. Spooner resigned on account of the pay being too small.

The Mayor asked that those required to give bonds prepare them at once. The joint meeting then adjourned.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS.

Annual Meeting of Cape Fear Camp—Officers Elected, etc.

The annual meeting of Cape Fear Camp Confederate Veterans was held at the Court House last night. Commander W. L. DeRosset was in the chair, and Capt. Henry Savage secretary. The Commander said he regretted not being able to prepare a report of the action of the Camp and Council for the past year.

The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year:

Commander—W. L. DeRosset.

First Vice Commander—W. S. Warrock.

Second Vice Commander—L. S. Belden.

Secretary—Henry Savage.

Treasurer—R. F. Hamme.

Members of Executive Council—G. W. Huggins, Chas. H. King, J. R. Marshall and P. Hiensberger.

The following were elected members: Messrs. A. M. Baldwin, J. A. Williams, Col. John W. Atkinson.

A committee consisting of Dr. J. E. Matthews, L. S. Belden and Col. Jno. D. Taylor were appointed to confer with Col. A. M. Waddell and other gentlemen to invite and ascertain when they would address the Camp.

Dr. Carmichael extended an invitation to the Camp to attend worship at St. John's Church at 5 p. m. Sunday, June 2nd. It was unanimously accepted, and the above committee was requested to try and secure Rev. George Patterson to preach the sermon on that occasion.

Mr. Carmichael paid a glowing tribute to the North Carolina private soldiers as well as the officers, and spoke most feelingly of the Hon. Geo. Davis and announced his sickness and moved that the following committee be appointed to express to him the sympathy of this Camp in his illness: Capt. E. L. Pearce, O. A. Wiggins, J. R. Marshall.

On motion of Mr. P. Heinsberger the Hon. Geo. Davis, Attorney-General of the late Confederate States, was unanimously elected an honorary member.

On motion the following was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Camp that an organization of the lineal male descendants of Confederate Veterans should be effected and that the Commander be requested to call them together without unnecessary delay and that the eligibility of each applicant be determined by the action of this or some other U. C. V. Camp, certified by its adjutant.

On motion, Rev. Dr. Jas. Carmichae was unanimously elected chaplain of this Camp.

On motion it was unanimously resolved, That this Camp hears with sorrow of the continued feebleness of our comrade Col. E. D. Hall, Maj. Gen'l Commanding the North Carolina Division of the U. C. V. Association, and hereby tenders its sincere sorrow and sympathy.

On motion the Camp adjourned.

AUDIT AND FINANCE.

The New Board Holds Its First Regular Meeting—The Proposed Bond Issue Discussed—An Effort to be Made to Place The Bonds at a Lower Rate Than Six Per Cent.

The Board of Audit and Finance met yesterday in regular session. Present, Messrs. Wm. Calder (chairman) C. H. Gauzer, H. C. McQueen, C. W. Yates, Jos. H Hanby.

Mayor Fishblate paid his respects to the new board and hoped for a continuance of the friendly relations existing. He said the Board was a great institution and had saved money to the city and tax-payers. The chairman, Mr. Calder, responded fittingly to Mr. Fishblate's remarks. He said that it was important that the Board of Aldermen should make up its budget of appropriations earlier than it had done heretofore, and the Mayor said that it should be done.

The ordinance authorizing the issuing of $50,000 in city bonds was read by the clerk.

The chairman said he had heard that various inquiries had been made as to these bonds, and asked the Mayor if these letters could not be laid before the Board before action was taken on the ordinance. The Mayor said that he had replied to the inquiries, but had not kept the letters.

The chairman said that the city was bound to issue the bonds under the act of the Legislature. The only question was whether they should issue bonds at 6 percent, or ask for bids for bonds bearing a lower rate of interest.

Mayor Fishblate said that a short time bond could not be placed at less than 6 per cent.

Mr. Calder read a telegram published recently in the Charleston News and Courier, that the city of Augusta, Ga., had just issued $88,000 of ten-year bonds, bearing 4½ per cent. interest, and that these bonds were sold at a premium sufficient to reduce the annual interest to 4 2-5 per cent.

After further discussion a resolution offered by Mr. Yates was adopted, that the chairman be authorized to correspond in the name of the Board of Audit and Finance with Messrs. Blair & Co., and others, and obtain the best terms possible.

City Attorney Manning's bill for legal services at Raleigh before the Supreme Court, was approved.

The Board refused to concur in the action of the Board of Aldermen in appropriating $100 for an examination of the books of the city clerk and treasurer by a committee of citizens appointed by the Mayor.

Bill of Jno. H. Jevens, $50.51, for repairs to city oil-lamps during the month of March, approved by the Committee on Lights of the Board of Aldermen, was sent back to this committee with request for information as to why this bill was so unusually large.

The chair called attention to the ordinance requiring the City Clerk and Treasurer to make returns the first week in March of each year, and the following order was made:

The Clerk of this Board is instructed to address a communication to the Mayor, the late Chairman of the Board of Audit and Finance and the City Attorney, and request them to inform this Board as to whether the requirements of Section 7 of the Tax Ordinance, as to settlement with the Tax Collector has been complied with, and if so, the result of the same for this Board's guidance in settling the accounts of the Tax Collector and Treasurer for the past year. Second, to address the Board of Aldermen and ask them to suggest what action should be taken in the settlement of the Treasurer's accounts as to the balances due the city by the broken banks of this city.

Bills for current expenses amounting to $5,388.45 were audited and approved.

A motion to make the time of regular meetings Tuesday at 8 p. m., in place of Monday, 8 p. m., was adopted.

The Board adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

BY WILLIAM H. BERNARD.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY, MORNING, APRIL 2, 1895

SOUTHWARD THEY MUST COME.

We live in an age of rapid development which is confined to no particular country and to no particular section of the world. The speeding locomotive which brings nations which were far apart close together and makes them neighbors, and the swift running steamer which within a week puts the products of one continent in the markets of another have stimulated and made practicable a development which the generations that have gone before never dreamed of and would have pronounced visionary if it had been predicted.

If ten years ago the American wheat-grower had been told that in the year 1895 his greatest and most formidable competitor would be found in Central America, he would have laughed at the man who said it. If the American cattle-raiser had been then told that he would have to look sharp to prevent his beef from being driven from foreign markets by the cattle-raisers of that same section he would have given little heed to that prediction. But these are both facts.

If the English dairyman had been told ten years ago that his most dangerous competitor would be found in far off Australia he would have given little heed to that for he never would have believed that the Australian could make and ship butter to England and sell it cheaper than he himself could.

If ten years ago the New England cotton manufacturer had been told that from the South would come cotton goods to be sold at his own doors for less money than he could afford to sell them he would have treated it as a silly utterance made by some one who didn't know what he was talking about. If the iron-manufacturer of Pennsylvania had been told that before the year 1895 iron would be made in the South and sold in Pennsylvania for less money than he could make it he would have laughed at the man who made the prediction and charitably considered him a fool. But all these things have been.

Argentina is becoming a formidable competitor of this country as an exporter of wheat for the simple reason that wheat can be grown there for less than it can in this country, while quick and cheap ocean transportation enable the exporter to put it in European markets for less money than the American exporter can, and give him a profit to satisfy him. She promises to become a formidable competitor in the European markets for beef for the same reasons.

The Australian dairyman has become the successful competitor of the English dairyman, for the simple reason that with his abundant and cheap pasturage he can make butter for less, while science has given him refrigerators in which it can be kept fresh and shipped long distances over tropical seas, and delivered in good condition, for less money than the English dairyman can afford to make and sell it.

The Southern cotton manufacturer and iron maker are becoming formidable competitors of the New England cotton manufacturer and the Pennsylvania iron maker, for the simple reason that having the advantage in the abundance and cheapness of the raw materials, and other advantages, they can make their goods for less money than the same character of goods can be made in New England or in Pennsylvania.

In these days of business rivalry and close competition it is the section or the man who can put goods on the market at the lowest price who is going to win, other things being equal. In competition in business matters the stronger and more aggressive will win, if he is determined to win and keeps that in view.

Great contests for industrial supremacy between sections or States are not settled in a day, for industrial revolutions require time, especially when one of the contestants has been long in the field and had grown rich and powerful before the other entered. But such contests are always eventually settled by the laws of trade, and one of these laws is that cheapness of production combined with requisite facilities for getting to market are potent and essential factors in determining the result. Other things being equal the advantage in these days of keen competition, and rapid transit is with the man who is nearest to the base of supplies of the raw material, and for this reason the mills must go to the cotton fields, and the furnaces to the iron and coal mines. The iron manufacturers of Massachusetts went to Pennsylvania because they could not hold out against cheap ore and cheap coal of that State, and so eventually will the bulk of her cotton manufacturers have to surrender to the Southern spindles and looms which can command the cheaper lint. And so in time will many of the iron mills of Pennsylvania and Ohio have to surrender to the Southern mills which command the cheaper raw materials and other advantages to reduce the cost of production to the consumer. Large bodies move slowly, and so do great industrial movements, but they move all the same.

MINOR MENTION.

The fusion Legislature which performed for about sixty-three days at Raleigh was elected as a "reform" Legislature, and began the "reform" before the seats of the distinguished solons got warm. This "reform" consisted altogether in turning all the Democrats they could out of office and putting fusionists in their places, and in making berths for as many of the friends and dependents of the solons as they could. Thus the expenses of that Legislature were increased about $6,000 over the expenses of the previous Democratic Legislature which had been denounced all over the State during the canvass for its "extravagance." The fact is that every man who was elected to the Legislature on the combine ticket went to Raleigh with the idea that the spoils belonged to the combine and that he was entitled to a proportionate part of them. To what extent they carried this belief is shown by the following extract from a letter of a Raleigh Republican to the News and Observer, criticising the course pursued by Mr. Ewart, who got himself elected Judge of the Western Criminal Circuit Court, and giving some inside history of the caucuses held to arrange the distribution of the spoils. Criticising solon Ewart's action in reference to the public printing, the writer says:

He had heard the caucus declaration: "Yes, we are a party of reform. But we are not to apply reform to ourselves. It is nothing more than right that those who have borne the brunt of the fight should be paid for it."

And again, on the occasion when a clerk protested against having assistants forced on him by the caucus when he had already more assistants than he could employ, he listened to these words: "Mr Speaker, I am at right smart cost in Raleigh. I have paid my boy's board ever since the Assembly met, and it's now half done, and he's not got a job yet. He is just as competent as any member of this caucus to do clerk's work, and I demand that he be put to work. We who have carried this fight to the finish, ought to be paid for it." And he was put to work.

And that same night Mr. Ewart received his pay (or thought he did.)

Messrs Jeter Pritchard, Marion Butler, S. Otho Wilson, Ewart, Cook and a number of smaller fry were put to work, and thus the reform job was finished up.

* *

A press dispatch last Saturday announced that the Richmond, Va., Locomotive works had received an order from the Southern Railway Company for fourteen locomotives. A few days ago we saw a statement in the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record to the effect that some of the leading Southern railroad companies had decided to give the building of their locomotives and cars to Southern shops even if they had to pay a little more for them. That is level-headed business sense, which in the end will pay the railroads handsomely. But there is no reason why this kind of work should not be turned out as cheaply and even more cheaply by Southern than by Northern establishments provided the railroads follow up the course of having it done in Southern establishments and give them enough of it to do to keep them busy and justify equipping themselves thoroughly for it. Of course the establishment that builds, say, a hundred locomotives in a year or a thousand cars can build them considerably cheaper, per locomotive or car, than the establishment which turns out ten locomotives or a hundred cars because it can afford to put in the most improved labor-saving machinery and the most efficient labor, to which steady employment can be assured. Give our Southern shops all they can do and it will not be long before they can turn out work in any quantity as cheaply or more cheaply than similar establishments in the North can, and thus our railroads will not only be able to secure their equipment at home as cheaply as elsewhere, but will at the same time build up great industries which will benefit them in other ways and aid immensely in the work of Southern industrial development.

A gang of fellows in Omaha, Neb., were making money pretty fast until the police interrupted them. They were raising $1 bills to $10's.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

— Stanly Enterprise: We are sorry to learn of the death of Mrs. Hannah Palmer, of Palmerville.

— Goldsboro Argus: After a long illness, patiently borne, Mr. Calvin B. Hicks, one of our oldest citizens, died at his home here yesterday morning at 6 o'clock, in the 68d year of his age.

— Rutherford Democrat: Sunday night Deputy Collector W. W. Krider, with U. S. Deputy Marshal Barney Butler and several assistants, made a raid into Polk county and found and destroyed three stills with a big lot of beer and snedlings — Wilkesboro News: On Tuesday night of last week some unknown parties went to the home of Bob Bauguss, near Traphill, and set fire to his barn. They took out all the cattle except his horse, which was burned to death. It is not known who the dastardly perpetrators are, but they are supposed to be moonshiners, who thought that some horses belonging to the revenuers were in the barn. The revenues were in that neighborhood, but some distance from that point.

— Charlotte News: Messrs. H. L. and Wilmer Davidson who last year conducted a factory for canning tomatoes, on a small scale, have decided to go into the business this year in earnest. Their farm is located on the Catawba, and their factory is known as the "Falling Waters Canning Company." They have arranged to plant 150 acres in tomatoes this year and will equip their factory with machinery for canning. This is becoming quite an industry in Mecklenburg.

— Durham Sun: A Durham farmer, and a thrifty one here at home, has a very poor opinion of sending sweet potatoes to Pennsylvania for sale. He has had some experience. Some time ago he made a consignment to a dealer in that State of fifty bushels. One day this week he received a notice from the dealer drawing on him for 17 cents to make out the balance for freight. The Durham man says he is positively not going to ship any more there, and he intends to look into this matter further and see what became of his sweet potatoes. He thinks they were pie for Pennsylvanians.

— Raleigh Visitor: All the prisoners in Johnston county jail, three in number, escaped night before last. They were in a steel cell, but shook open the door, the lock of which was defective. One prisoner was white and two were colored. After they got out of the cell it was quite easy for them to cut through a brick wall. —— The trial of James S. Wilcox at Elizabeth City for the killing of John E. Brothers last October created much interest. Wilcox was found guilty of murder in the second degree, and after a sentence of fifteen years in the penitentiary had been passed upon him his counsel moved for a new trial and bond fixed at $10,000, which was given, and he is now at home with his family. —— The outlook for the State public schools is said by State Superintendent Scarborough to be bad. The new school law is the work of bunglers. Never was one more out of shape. He says the new law was "just whacked out," and is disjointed. It takes away all the leverage used to arouse enthusiasm on the part of teachers.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—— If it is true that Gov. McKinley's managers are trying to shut the negro out of the Republican party, they had as well give up the job as hopeless. The Southern Republican party can't shake the negro on the same principle that the tail can't shake the dog.—Savannah News, Dem.

GRANDMOTHER'S DOLLARS.

What Her Descendants Might Have Had In Interest From Them.

A woman recently died in a neighboring town, and besides a granddaughter and her cynical husband she left a few relatives and $80 in gold, with other things. The woman was over 95 when she died, and the $80 included her wedding presents. Like many persons in those days, she held fast to the shining eagles and had had them for nearly 77 years. When she died, of course the birds were distributed among the heirs. The cynical husband, who was married to the old lady's favorite granddaughter, mused upon the $80 in gold and stripped his thoughts of all sentiment as he speculated in his mind what might have been. He is not quite through figuring yet, and his constant query is, if grandmother had only put that $80 in the bank when she first got it, what a clutch of golden eagles we would have now! He mused on this as he got ready on cold mornings to go to work, and his favorite topic of thought was suggested as he jingled a nickel and a bunch of keys looking for his car fare. Then he began to figure that money at 6 per cent double in about 11 years, and he lost sleep as he thought how many times 11 years went into 77 years. When the cynical husband finally referred the question of his losses to a bank man, he learned that in 50 years the $80 in gold would have amounted to $1,473.60. Without figuring any further on the problem, the bank man said he would easily consider that $10,000 was lost by saving the $80.

It is not an unusual thing in some of the old banks to have an account doubled many times over and over again. One day last week in the Worcester county institution for savings an account was reckoned at $214.03 which originally was but $10.65. Nothing has ever been added to or taken from the bank account, and it was left to accumulate. It took about 50 years for the original sum to gather all that moss. There was another instance in the same bank where thirty-one times the original sum was paid to a depositor. No one wonders that somebody discovered and said that money makes money.—Worcester (Mass.) Gazette.

BULWER'S ODDITIES.

The Fight That He Made Against All Signs of Old Age.

Bulwer's appearance was decidedly what is generally understood by "aristocratic," or what the French call "distingue." Tall, slim, with finely cut features, prominent among which was a long aquiline nose, with an abundant crop of curly brown hair and a full beard, the first impression he produced, aided by a careful toilet, was one of ease and elegance. At a dinner table, where he liked to speak, and, if possible, to speak alone, he was certainly useful as well as ornamental, with his large blue ribbon and star of the Order of the Bath. There was a certain naivete, strange as that word may sound when applied to so confirmed a man of the world, in his vain and very apparent struggle against the irresistible encroachments of age. He did not give in with that philosophical resignation which might have been expected of one so clever and in some respects so wise. He fought against it tooth and nail. Lord Lytton's hair seemed dyed, and his face looked as if art had been called in to rejuvenate it. A quack in Paris had pretended to cure his growing deafness, a constant source of legitimate grief to him. He was radiant one autumn on his return to town because he thought he was cured, but not for long. The copious use of snuff was no doubt part of the attempted cure, of which the most palpable results were large dark red or blue pocket handkerchiefs, quite out of harmony with his otherwise elegant toilet. His expressions of regret at his impaired digestive organs had something ludicrous about it. He would point with a sigh to a rosy cheeked American apple and say, "To think that there are people who can eat that!"

One of his physical infirmities—his deafness—proved a bar to his ambition. He was sorely disappointed when Lord Beaconsfield, instead of including him in his last cabinet, "kicked him up stairs" into the house of lords, principally because he could not follow the debate.—Rudolph Lehman's "Recollections."

Mrs. Hearst Gives a Library to a Town.

The free use of perhaps the finest and best appointed library and reading rooms in the whole northwest was presented, with appropriate ceremonies, to the citizens of the town of Lead, S. D., on Christmas night by Mrs. Phœbe A. Hearst, widow of Senator Hearst of California. The library and reading rooms occupy the third floor of a new hall recently erected by the Miners' union at a cost of $100,000 and contain in addition to a well selected stock of literature, embracing the leading periodicals of Europe and America, all of the paraphernalia necessary to play the popular games now in vogue. Once a fortnight a free musical recital will be given in the main reading room, Mrs. Hearst having employed a librarian with exceptional musical talent and sent, with the furniture, a magnificent piano for that purpose.—Chicago Tribune.

Moisture and Temperature.

A cubic foot of air at the temperature of zero (Fahrenheit) can contain only .5 of a grain of water vapor; at 32 degrees it can hold 2.13 grains; at 65 it can contain 6.6 grains, and at 98 it can hold 18.96 grains of moisture in suspension. These figures go to show that summer air can hold at least nine times the quantity of dampness that air can when reduced to the temperature of freezing.—St. Louis Republic.

— Louisburg Times: Arch Stokes, a young man 18 years old, living on the land of G. T. Aycue, about eight miles from town, was killed last Saturday. He was helping to raise a barn and a pole fell off strinking him on the head, killing him instantly.

You Don't Have to Swear Off

Says the St. Louis Journal of Agriculture in an editorial about No-To-Bac, the famous tobacco habit cure. "We know of many cases cured by No-To-Bac, one, a prominent St. Louis architect, smoked and chewed for twenty years; two boxes cured him so that even the smell of tobacco makes him sick." STORIES OF PAPER.

HOW WATER MARKS WERE MADE AND WHY THEY CAME INTO USE.

Clever Use Made of Them by Ireland In His Shakespearean Forgeries—Elaborate Designs Impressed by the "Dandy" Roller—The Bogus Virgin Mary Letter.

Stories and incidents innumerable are wound up in the art of paper making, and its mechanical processes have afforded to the ingenious story teller many a chance for a thrilling tale.

This is especially true of the system of placing water marks, so called, in various brands or makes of paper.

Perhaps the most interesting true story which has to do with this branch of the industry is that of the famous "Ireland's Confessions."

Ireland had fabricated some Shakespeare manuscripts, which for a long time were accepted as actual. They made such an impression indeed that a number of men, famous at that time for their erudition and for their literary standing, voluntarily prepared a testimonial attesting absolute belief in the authenticity of the manuscripts. To this document these men affixed their signatures and sent the paper broadcast.

The whole of the original edition of the fakes was disposed of in a few hours, and so great was the eagerness for the edition that single copies were disposed of in auction rooms at enormous prices.

Some time after that Ireland himself threw these gentlemen into much sorrow by explaining just how he had had fun with them.

Ireland's story was that the sheet of paper which he used was the outside of several others on which some accounts had been kept during the reign of Charles I. At that time Ireland was wholly unacquainted with the subject of water marks.

"I carefully selected," says he, "two half sheets not having any mark whatever, on which I penned my first effusion." A few pages further on he wrote: "Being thus urged forward to the production of more manuscripts, it became necessary that I should possess a sufficient quantity of old paper to enable me to proceed, in consequence of which I applied to a bookseller, who, for the sum of 5 shillings, suffered me to take from all the folio and quarto volumes in his shop the fly leaves which they contained.

"By this means I was amply stored with that commodity, nor did I fear any mention of the circumstances by the bookseller. As I was fully aware, from the variety of water marks which are in existence at the present day, that they must have constantly been altered since the period of Elizabeth, and being for some time wholly unacquainted with the water marks of that age, I very carefully produced my first specimens of the writing on such sheets of old paper as had no mark whatever.

"Having heard it frequently stated that the appearance of such marks on the papers would have greatly tended to establish their validity, I listened to every remark that was made on the subject, and I at length gleaned the intelligence that a jug was the prevalent water mark of the reign of Elizabeth, in consequence of which I inspected all the sheets of old paper then in my possession, and having selected such as had the jug on them I produced the succeeding manuscripts upon these, being careful, however, to mingle with them a certain number of blank leaves that the production on a sudden of so many water marks might not excite suspicion in the breasts of those persons who were most conversant with the manuscripts."

A traveler in Messina was once shown a letter written by the Virgin Mary with her own hand. He remarked that it must indeed be a miracle, since the paper showed by its water mark that it was not made till some centuries after the age of Mary.

It is the greatest mystery to most people how water marks are made. And yet the matter is the simplest thing in the world. In the manufacture of paper the pulp, before it has begun to be dried and after it has been spread on the moving platform, passes under a roller called the "dandy." On this "dandy" is affixed the device which works the water mark.

It is of bent wire, and as the roller presses the paper it presses into it the mark.

In the same manner most elaborate designs and even pictures and intricate representations of whole battle scenes have been done from an engraved plate similar to an electrotype, used in the same manner on the "dandy" roller.

Of course check paper and bank paper is the most important variety distinguished by water marks. In a pair of £5 note molds prepared by the old process there are 8 curved borders, 16 figures, 168 large waves and 240 letters, which had all to be separatedly secured by the finest wire to the curved surface.

There were 1,056 wires and 67,584 twists and the same repetition where the stout wires were introduced to support the under surface.

In ancient times the water marks were used for the same purposes as the old inn signs. The old inns had dolls and behives, horses and various other forms as signs. For the same reason the paper makers had some distinguishing mark which made their product distinct from that of other makers.

A very famous mark of the sixteenth century was the handmark—a hand topped with a star. The jug or pot mark gave the name to the "pot" paper, while the foolscap mark used on paper of a certain size gave that size its name, which it retains to this day.

The post paper was so called because it bore a mark of a shield with a post horn on it.—London Letters.

A Delicate Distinction.

"Did you say you wanted Shakespeare's works?" asked the book store clerk.

"No," replied the haughty girl; "I want his plays."—Washington Star.

"There's one thing about me that I don't understand," said Tommy thoughtfully, "and that's why it is that making marks on wall paper is such lots of fun and making 'em in copy-books in school is such hard work."

The use of Australia as a convict ground was objected to by the population as soon as the country was occupied by actual colonists, and the transportation system was given up in 1857.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. Feather Superstition.

We have long been acquainted with the peacock feather superstition, but were not aware until a few days ago that it extended to all feathered creatures. A young girl admired the beautiful pigeons strutting, cooing and sunning themselves in the covert of the house where she was boarding and asked the landlady to sell her a pair to take home with her. "No, indeed, child," was the immediate response. "Not for any money would I sell you those birds. When one person gives or sells an acquaintance a feathered thing, there is sure to be trouble between them, and I do not want to fall out with you."—Philadelphia Times.

An Easy Way.

The main object of life is to derive satisfaction from it, the philosophers say. Therefore when you are what is commonly known as selfish and grasping you can silence your conscience by telling it that you are no worse than the unselfish and sacrificing. You simply have another method of enjoying life.—Exchange.

MY FOREST PATH.

I know a path all fringed with ferns,
A woodland path with many turns,
Where in the overarching trees,
That toss their heads in every breeze,
The wild birds carol sweetest lays
In weeper song and matin praise.
I sit me down, and at my feet
The light and shade, coquetting, meet.
The harshest sounds that greet my ear
Are tinkling bells in pastures near,
And rippling waves that to the shore
Repeat their story evermore.
Oh, fitful lake! so like my heart,
Thy moods strange thoughts within me start!
Like thee, I sometimes seem at rest,
But oft by surging cares oppressed.
Yet not today, to wearied brain
Shall vexing problems come again.
The lake its soothing music hath,
And blessed peace my forest path.

MARS' TOM'S GRAVE.

A Faithful Old Colored Servant Devoted to His Late Master.

"I saw a pathetic instance at Greensboro of a negro's fidelity," said W. L. Williams, a traveling man. "About ten miles from the town I saw a grave with a marble slab at its head. Seated near it was an old negro with a bunch of flowers which he was placing over the mound. I stopped my horse and spoke to him.

"'Whose grave is that, uncle?' I asked.

"'Mars' Tom's, boss. I'ze his nigga.'

"'Oh, no. You are no man's nigger now. Didn't you know that you were free?'

"'Dunno nuffin 'bout dat, sah. I'ze Mars' Tom's nigga, sah, an he's waitin foh me suah up dah. Dese han's done tote 'im frum dat place dey call Shiloh, an he died while I wah a-totin 'im. Jest closed he eyes an went ter sleep, an when I comes ter cross de ribber of Jordan he jest hole out his han's an he tells de angel at de gate who I be, an he let me in. I dreamed 'bout it las' night, boss.'

"I was interested in the old fellow and wanted to hear his story. The slab at the grave told me that it was that of 'Colonel Tom Winn, killed at the battle of Shiloh,' and I questioned the faithful negro further:

"'How old are you, uncle?'

"'Most a hundred, I reckon, sah.'

"'Was you in the war?'

"'Went wif Mars' Tom, sah. I'ze his nigga, an he's in heaben. I'ze jest a-waitin till dese ole bones, weary trabbling over de road, 'll take me ter de ribber, when Mars' Tom'll help his ole nigga ober.'

"'Were you with him when he was killed?'

"'I was right dar, boss. Done pick im up an toted 'im ter dat place dey call Corinth. Den I found a train; got ter de place dey call Chattanooga. De nex' day we wah in Atlanta. Mars' Tom den in his glory. Dis heah nigga lef' ter 'ten his body. Dey buried 'im when I got 'im heah, an dis nigga jest lef' ter 'ten his grabe an keep de flowers hyah.'

"I found upon inquiry that the story was true, and for a quarter of a century the faithful negro had done nothing but attend the grave of his young master, whose body he brought from northern Mississippi to central Georgia."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Application Embarrassed.

There lives in a certain small town a poor minister who has a large family which his salary does not begin to cover (literally), so the congregation have donated cast off clothing for the children, and even the poor minister's wife goes to church in the last year's bonnet and cloak of a deacon's wife. The poor lady has grown used to this and does the best she can with the conglomeration of dresses, cloaks and hats which are sent her, though the result is sometimes rather tragic. However, she has always felt that she did nobly by the children, and if the dresses and coats and cloaks and trousers were misfits none was ever unkind enough to say anything about it. One Sunday, however, she dressed the nine hopefuls with great care and marched them to the church. She was a little late, and just as she opened the door and started up the aisle her husband thundered from the pulpit, "Even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." He did not see the joke, but the congregation tittered, and the mother was ready to cry.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Dispelling an Illusion.

One of my readers wants to know the correct pronunciation of the word "Llanthony." It is always a painful thing to me to dispel the prevalent illusion that newspaper editors know everything, but owing, I suppose, to the fact that I was taught Latin and Greek in my youth, when I ought to have been learning the tongues of the living, I have grown up ignorant of the proper pronunciation of Llanthony. All I can boast of is a general idea that in Welsh most of the consonants are vowels and most of the vowels sounds which no Englishman can hope to imitate. But if any of my readers can throw any light on "Llanthony" I shall be happy to assist in spreading it.—London Truth.

Curran's Retort.

Curran's friend was tickled by the orator's retort apropos of the jury system. The friend was bragging of his attachment to it and said, "With trial by jury I have lived, and, by the blessing of God, with trial by jury I will die!"

"Oh," said Curran in amazement, "then you've made up your mind to be hanged, Dick!"

The first patent granted in America was issued by the general court of Boston, March 6, 1646, to Joseph Jenks for his invention of a water wheel. A facsimile copy has recently been placed in the patent office.

She Listened.

Miss C.'s portrait hung on the wall at the exhibition. Miss C. hung around her portrait. Miss C. had lips that an ablebodied man would walk five miles to kiss. Her eyes were twin stars. Upon her forehead hung two beautiful curls—twin curls. Miss C. was delightful to behold.

She was immersed in the study of her catalogue. Of course she was not there to listen to the comments.

"Beautiful picture, isn't it?"

"Yes; I wonder if it's true to life?"

"I don't know. It's awfully pretty anyway."

"It is pretty. The features are perfect, but I don't think she looks very intelligent."

Miss C., with a crimson face, slapped her book shut and walked away.—New York World.

LAPSES OF IDENTITY.

PEOPLE WHO STRANGELY DISAPPEAR FOR LONG PERIODS.

When They Reappear to Their Friends, They Have No Memory of Their Wanderings—Cases of a Tinsmith and a Lawyer Related by Dr. Osborne.

A paper entitled "People Who Drop Out of Sight," by Dr. A. E. Osborne, superintendent of a home for children at Glen Ellen, Cal., was read at a recent meeting of the Medico-Legal society at the Academy of Medicine, New York. After speaking of mysterious disappearances in general and the usual inability to account for them the paper gave several instances which the author says happened to persons and under circumstances well known to him.

The first case was that of a man of middle age, "in rugged health and free from any inherited neuropathic taint." He was a plumber by trade and lived in a town near Philadelphia. He was prosperous and was neither overworked nor the victim of business troubles. His family life was harmonious, and he had no bad habits. The Sunday on which he disappeared he had been in the house all day, reading and playing with his children. About 4 o'clock he got up from the lounge on which he lay, changed his house jacket for an ordinary business coat and told his wife he was going out for a short walk. He stepped into the street and suddenly disappeared, as if he had vanished into air.

Although a conspicuous figure in the town, and although the streets were crowded, he was seen by nobody. His absence continuing, the next day an exhaustive search was made for him. But nothing could be learned. There was absolutely no trace of him, either in the town or in the surrounding country. In due course the business was disposed of and the family moved to Chicago, giving up all hope of finding a clew to the man's disappearance.

One day two years later a number of men were working at their trade in a tinshop in one of the far southern states. Suddenly one of them dropped his work and clasped his hands to his head.

"My God!" he cried, looking about dazedly, "where am I? How did I get here? This isn't my shop! Where am I? What does it mean?"

His companions were at first disposed to laugh, but when they saw the man's changed expression, the beads of sweat on his brow and his nervous twitchings they knew he was not drunk, but under the influence of some great emotion. They spoke to him, but he insisted that the name they called him by was not his. At last he made his way to the boss of the shop and tried to explain about his family and his business in the north. The boss was incredulous. He knew the man as a wandering tinsmith who had drifted into the town seeking work at his trade and whom he had employed. He had proved to be a trustworthy and skilled workman, and no further inquiry had been made.

"Under a fictitious name," Dr. Osborne says in his paper, "the man had been known to his companions and had been paid. He remembered nothing of the past during his period of employment, but at last a dim recollection had come to him of that fateful Sunday—his rising to go out, his promise to return soon—and then all was a blank. He had no money, although he had worked steadily in his shop and had received good wages. At the last accounts I had of him he was at Chicago, living his normal life. Somewhat mystified over his realization of the strange freak in which he figured, although feeling well and apparently in mental balance, he realizes that he has been the central figure in some overstrange mental phenomenon quite mysterious enough to make him at times doubt his sanity."

Dr. Osborne's second case he speaks of thus: "A similar case occurred to a resident of another town near Philadelphia. This man, whom we shall designate as X., was a lawyer, a prominent politician—a former member of congress, I believe—a man of fine oratorical powers and of brilliant attainments.

"One day he got up from his desk, leaving his lawbooks open at the pages he had been consulting, and stepped outside for a few moments. He disappeared. In due course vigorous search was instituted, reservoirs and streams were dragged for his body on the presumption that he had committed suicide, and, in short, all the means that money and influence would put into operation were employed, but in vain. Not the slightest clew was obtained. His domestic affairs were well known to be most happy. He was abstemious in his habits and more devoted to his profession than to society. The hue and cry of premeditated flight was dispelled by the disordered state of his unlocked desk, over which were scattered papers and a mass of unfinished work. His accounts were all right, and among his papers were found uncashed checks amounting to several thousand dollars.

"After several months had passed word came through official channels that X. was in Australia and had applied to a representative of our government there to establish his identity and procure means for his transportation home. It was some time before his family were fully satisfied of his existence in that faroff country under such startling circumstances—broken in health, penniless and unable to give a definite account of how he got there.

"X. finally established his identity. His passage money was forwarded, and in due season he arrived in this country. He went direct to his former home, and after a short period for recuperation took up the practice of his profession and was, as he has continued to be up to the last information I have had of him, his former normal self. How he had disappeared he was unable to say. He knew nothing until 'he came to himself' aboard a steamer nearing an Australian port."

CATCHING JEWFISH.

ANGLING FOR MARINE MONSTERS IN SAN DIEGO BAY.

The Process Is of the Progressive Kind, The Part Toothpicks Play—The Run With a Keg—Members of the Bass Family That Weigh Hundreds of Pounds.

Don't talk to a man from southern California about black bass fishing, or he will make your best bass story a feeble, pitiful thing. He will tell you of black bass that could swallow the biggest day's catch you ever made and take in your creel for dessert without as much as gulping. Voice a doubt, and the man from San Diego will pull from his fishing traps something that looks like a one-fluked ship's anchor. That is what he fishes with for the strange, monstrous black bass in the bays and about the islands of the southern California coast. They don't call them black bass down there, though the fish commissioners say they are, and the naturalists have identified them by fins and bones and form with the gamy two and three pounders that make men fickle even to trout.

The men who catch these fish that sometimes weigh 1,000 pounds call them jewfish—a corruption of jumfish. The last is a translation of one of their Mexican names. Probably they were called junefish from the fact that they are plentiful along the shores in the late spring and early summer. No matter how he got his name, the jewfish is a wonder. He looks like a bass fisherman's nightmare when they get him out of the water. Every fin and mark is there, magnified out of all proportion. His scales are as big as half dollars, his mouth is a gaping chasm, and the spikes of his dorsal fin are bigger than tenpenny nails.

The process of catching a jewfish is a progressive and interesting one. The fishers begin at the beginning. With bent pins or dip nets they look for minnows or sardelles. The quarry secured, it promptly becomes bait, and the concourse is treated to smelt fishing. Then comes the smelt's turn in the succession. He is impaled, and the fisherman, with a heavier rod and a larger hook, goes to the other side of the wharf for a halibut or a sea bass.

When the bait, dead or alive, is ready, the stoutest armed man on the wharf picks up the line. He swings the two or three pounds of bait around his head like an Indian does the bolas and hurls it seaward. The great line, as thick as a lead pencil, coils out after the hook, and that is nearly all until the fish comes along.

Incidentally toothpicks play quite a part in the fishing. Each fisherman takes a handful with him when he leaves the breakfast table. They stick one in a crack at the top of a pile and loosely loop the line around it. The shore part of the line is coiled on the wharf, and the end is fast to an empty powder keg or some such thing that will float well. On the toothpick is stuck a bit of white rag, and as half a dozen or a dozen lines are used at once there is a string of these little signal flags all along the dock. The fisherman has nothing more to do for awhile than to watch the flags. When one goes down, it means that something has taken the bait. After gathering in the barracouda heads or the impaled halibut the jewfish starts away like the locomotive on a fast express. Down goes the signal flag. Everybody around runs for the line. They know they can't hold the fish, but the resistance makes it harder for him and helps them to tire him out—the ultimate object. The great fish does not struggle at first, but moves steadily seaward, pulling the line through the men's hands. Occasionally, when the fish weighs less than 200 pounds, they can tire him out without paying out all of the line, but usually it all goes, and presently the struggle is transferred to the water. The empty powder keg bounces over the water most erratically, the men chase it in a boat, and when they catch it hold on. Then the real fun of jewfishing begins. It is just sport for a fish of any size to tow a whiteball around the bay, and it is pretty rough sailing in his wake. As soon as he realizes that there is a fight on the jewfish seems to forget that he is a staid bottom fish. All the steam of his black bass ancestors gets riley, and he plunges and turns, twists and strikes. Somewhere down in the cavern of his gullet he has an arrangement of bone like a couple of millstones, and when he discovers he cannot spit out the hook he tries to swallow it and grind the line apart, so the slack has to be carefully attended to. There are some tremendous fish in San Diego bay, and though the hooks are made of hand forged tool steel they have snapped many of them.

If everything goes well, if the hook holds and the fish does not grind the line, if he steers away from submerged buoy chains and docks, the fight must end in the death of the fish. Sometimes he tows the boat for three hours before his strength is gone and he is hauled to the surface. The death struggle is worst of all. The fish is dragged to the top and lies there, apparently all but dead. Then they drive a harpoon into him, and the sting of the steel starts all his life again. The harpoon line holds him near the surface, and he makes a great race for a little while, but, of course, it cannot last. At the end the fish is towed back to the dock, and there the floating population of San Diego is assembled. Everybody gets hold of a rope and hoists the giant fish upon the dock, and there the tired monster flounders, its mouth gaping like a tunnel and its eyes, big as baseballs, starting from their sockets.—San Francisco Examiner.

Woman Inventor's Prayer to Congress.

A unique petition has turned up on the house side among some old papers. The memorialist is a woman, and she asks congress to appropriate $500 to enable her to perfect and place upon the market sundry inventions, which she lacks means to secure patents upon. She says: "I have asked assistance from most every one I thought most likely to aid. I began on the common liner, went on to the thousanders, then to millionaires, governors and the president—not the present president—but I asked Brother Arthur. They all paid as deaf an ear to it as the Alps would to the chirp of a snowbird." She asks congress to "look into the patent office treasury and see if you can find an idle $500 that is doing no one any good. Bring it out and let me use it for a season. Money, like trees, yields more by being stirred about the roots."—Washington Post.

Von Bulow's Independence.

So far as the audience was concerned, Von Bulow always made a point of doing exactly as he pleased. On one occasion when a Leipzig audience insisted on recalling him in spite of his repeated refusal to play again he came forward and said, "If you do not stop this applause, I will play all Bach's 48 preludes and fugues from beginning to end."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Dramatic Plans of the Elder and Younger Dumas That Miscarried.

A curious and interesting bit of correspondence between Alexandre Dumas, father, and Alexandre Dumas, son, has been published in Paris by Georges Boyer, showing the two eminent Frenchmen had planned to write a theatrical piece together. Unfortunately the plan was not carried out, and the literary world was deprived maybe of a brilliant produciton. The letters read as follows:

PARIS, Oct. 7, 1865.

Alexandre Dumas, father, to Alexandre Dumas, son:

DEAR MASTER—After 30 years of struggle, defeats and victories, of failures and successes, I believe that, if not a great celebrity, I have at least the reputation of being a fruitful novelist. Only yesterday I received from Victor Hugo, in Guernsey, a letter full of encouragement and congratulations. I have the honor to belong to the Society of Authors and the Society of Dramatists. My modest claims to the first are: (Here follows a list of his most successful works.) Now, I beg, dear master, the honor of writing with you a drama in five acts, the ideas for which I shall discuss with you at our first meeting. The ideas are, I believe, in accordance with the tastes of the day. Will you agree?

ALEXANDRE DUMAS, Father.

The reply of the son was:

Alexandre Dumas, son, to Alexander Dumas, father:

DEAR MASTER—Your letter came to the correct address. The friendship, the love, the respect, the admiration which I have for my father make it my duty and pleasure to accept blindly your amiable offer. Be it so, therefore, we shall work together on some piece in five acts. To work with you, let me say, between us, will be no bad piece of business for me. ALEXANDRE DUMAS, Son.

The Morning Star.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 2, 1895

SPOTS AND FUTURES

New York Sun's Review of the Cotton Market—New Orleans Crop Statement.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Sun says: Cotton rose five to six points, but reacted later and closed barely steady with early months one to two points lower, and some of the next crop months one to two points higher. May was one point below July and August instead of being at a premium of two or three points as heretofore, and it was only one point above June. There is a movement on foot to have the New York Cotton Exchange closed on Friday and the day following. This is usually done because Liverpool always closes on Good Friday. Silver advanced ¼d. in London and then lost part of the improvement. It was 1¼c. higher here. Fall River did a large business last week, the sales of print cloths being 870,000 pieces. Here in New York the cotton goods market is in a much better position than recently. Liberal sales of brown sheetings and drills have been reported. The signs in the industrial world generally are more favorable. Liverpool advanced one and-a-half to three points for futures and 1 32d. on the spot, with sales of 12,000 bales. Spot cotton here was dull and unchanged. In Manchester yarns were quiet and firm and cloths quiet. Port receipts today 18,818, against 17,968 this day last week and 8,195 last year. Exports from the ports were 7,319 bales to Great Britain and 13,436 to the continent. The Southern spot markets were generally quiet, firm and unchanged. Norfolk and Augusta advanced 1-16c and Baltimore ¼c. New Orleans advanced 8 to 9 points but lost most of it. Estimated receipts to-morrow 8,000 to 9,000 bales. Bombay receipts for the half week were 26,000 bales, against 29,000 for the same time last year.

To-day's features: Long liquidation of May and August carried prices down a little to-day in the latter trading, though early in the session there was further advance, owing to a rise in Liverpool, a further advance in silver, favorable advices from Manchester and an estimated reduction in the acreage in Louisiana during the coming season of about 25 per cent. Many are not surprised at the reaction to-day, who, nevertheless, believe that the general tendency of cotton is upward.

CUBA'S REVOLUTION.

Reports Concerning Movements of the Patriots—Gen. Maceo Has a Large Force, Well Drilled and Disciplined.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

TAMPA, FLA., April 1.—In an interview with the Times-Union's correspondent to-night Col. F. Figuerdo, leader of the Cuban patriots in Tampa, and the recognized head of the movement in this section, said: "The latest news I have from Cuba is that Gen. Maceo has landed a large force of men on the island, together with 3,000 rifles, ammunition and army stores But at what point the landing was effected I am not informed. He has a large force, with thirty-seven officers and his men are well drilled and disciplined. General Maceo captured a convoy, taking several hundred men prisoners, besides securing one hundred mules and a large lot of valuable munitions of war. This is the latest fact. I know there are all sorts of rumors flying about, but what I have stated are the simple facts as they exist according to our best information. I would advise very little credence to be placed in highly colored and sensational newspaper reports. We shall learn more fully just what is being done upon the arrival of the steamer from Havana to-morrow morning."

Gonzales Quesada, secretary of the Cuban movement in the United States, who is the guest of Col. Figuerdo and Enrique Collozo, a Cuban leader from New York, also here, express the same opinion, substantially, as Col. Figuerdo. Col. Figuerdo, Secretary Quesada, Enrique Colosso and Dr. Gominus will go to Jacksonville Wednesday and will address a mass meeting on Thursday night.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

SENSATIONAL INFORMATION WITH RESPECT TO THE CUBAN REVOLUTION.

An Official Exhibition of American Interest in the Nicaragua Canal to be Made—Southern Railway Co. vs. Seaboard Air Line—Bold Burglars—Gov. McKinley—Treasury Statement.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Information of a somewhat sensational character has been received in Washington within the past twenty-four hours with respect to the rebellion in Cuba. The officials interested have been informed from sources which they deem entirely reliable, that a prominent Eastern ship-building firm has agreed to furnish the insurgents a torpedo boat at an early day, which will be used to destroy the Spanish war vessels now cruising in Cuban waters. Notification to the State Department came from the Spanish Legation.

President Cleveland has determined that an official exhibition of American interest in the Nicaraguan Canal, which was authorized by the last session of Congress, shall be promptly made, and the Government commission to examine the Canal route, for which the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill made $30,000 immediately available, is to be sent to Greytown as soon as possible on a United States war vessel to emphasize the concern of this Government in the enterprise of American citizens who have been acting under a charter granted by Congress in 1889. The programme of the Administration's action in the premises was agreed upon at last Friday's Cabinet meeting, when Secretaries Lamont and Herbert were directed to select a member of the corps of army engineers and one of the naval civil engineers, respectively, who, with a civilian to be selected in a day or two, will constitute the Board of Engineers charged with "ascertaining the feasibility, permanence and cost of construction and completion" of the Nicaraguan canal, which "shall visit and personally inspect the route of said canal, examine and consider the plans, profile, prisms, and specifications for its various parts, and report thereon to the President "on or before May 1st" next. It was also decided that the army should have the ranking officer of the board, and Secretary Lamont selected Colonel William P. Craighill for the chairmanship. Colonel Craighill was the last President of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and the weight of his opinion upon the canal project would be convincing beyond that of any other man who could be appointed on the board. Secretary Herbert chose Civil Engineer Mordecai T. Endicott, whose relative rank of Lieutenant Commander is but a degree below that of Mr. Craighill and who is second officer on the civil engineer's list of the navy, a man of high professional attainments and an authority upon naval works ashore. The President has not yet announced the civilian member, but Col. J. A. Montgomery, of Birmingham, Ala., who has been prominent in the construction of Southern railroads, is said to be the leading candidate.

As soon as the President completes the board it will organize in Washington and go to New York, where the plans, specifications and contracts of the canal company will be closely scrutinized The party will then go to Mobile and embark on the Montgomery, which has been detailed for the duty of conveying the party to Greytown, and which will remain there as long as their stay lasts, furnishing them a marine guard as well as boats and steam launches and lending them the moral support of the United States flag.

The Southern Railway Company, which has been observing the long and short haul clause of the Inter-State Commerce law, has applied to the Inter-State Commission for relief under that clause so that it may be able to meet the low passenger rates of the Seaboard Air Line to Atlanta and other places without making corresponding rate reductions to intermediate stations. The commission will hear all parties interested and investigate the matter at its office in Washington, D. C., on Saturday, April 6, 1895, at 10 o'clock a. m.

The office of the Washington Steamboat Company on Seventh near N street, southwest, was entered by burglars about 1 o'clock this morning. The watchman, James Fornshow, was bucked and gagged by the robbers, who then blew one safe open and opened another by the combination, getting from both about $800 in money and many valuable papers. Three men were concerned in the robbery. No clues exist as to their identity.

An increase of $9,487,750 in National bank note circulation during the month of March is shown by the monthly statement issued by Comptroller Eckles to-day, making the total stand at $209,450,144 on April 1.

Gov. McKinley started for Columbus, Ohio, this evening. The Governor says he has made only three other appointments—one to speak in Ottawa, Kansas, one in Atlanta, Georgia, and one at some other point—and that representations sent out that he was planning a "swing around the circle" were entirely unjustifiable.

The official Treasury statement issued to-day shows that during the month of March the excess of expenditures over receipts was $946,882. The receipts were $637,778 greater than in March, 1894, and the expenditures $5,490,608 less than in last March.

The President to-day re-commissioned the following postmasters, whose offices, formerly fourth-class, have now become presidential: Sidney B. Connor, Live Oak, Fla.; Wm. F. Marshall, Gastonia, N. C.

The Secretary of the Interior has approved two clear lists of 67,580 acres in the Jackson, Miss., land district, selected by the State as inuring to the benefit of the Gulf and Ship Island Railroad.

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Southern Railway Company reports for February gross earnings of $1,356,458, a decrease of $191,834; expenses $967,612, decrease, $169,360; and net $388,846, decrease $49,474, and from July 1st to February 28th, gross $11,498,594, increase $333,333; expenses, $7,557,636, decrease $169,559, and net $3,941,348, increase $492,993.

OHIO ELECTION.

Result Conceded to be a Republican Victory.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 1.—Advices to the Tribune show that to-day's election brought out a large vote in Columbus, Cleveland, Toledo and Hamilton and in a few smaller cities. Reports are not in and majorities not given. In the majority of places the vote was light. It was the first election where women could vote, and the privilege was taken advantage of generally. In most instances where women were candidates for the school board they were elected. The results in the State can be considered a Republican victory. No disturbances of consequence are reported.
